

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The following analysis is to determine which types of properties the client should be targeting investments in.

The top 10 neighborhoods in terms of most reviews in the last year are Nolita, West Village, East Harlem, East Village, Chelsea, Upper West Side, Midtown, Harlem, Hell's Kitchen, and Lower East Side.

I found that the most popular bedroom size for vacation rentals is 2 bedrooms.

I found that Saturday and Friday have the highest occupancy rates

I recommend investing in listings in the Lower East with 2 bedrooms. I estimate the client will get a revenue of $151,803.88 a year if they invest in these listings

Assumptions

We will only focus on vacation rentals (only rentals with a minimum night requirement of 7 days or fewer will be applicable)

Listings with no reviews from the last 12 months are most likely active

We will assume that the number of reviews in the last 12 months will be the best estimate of how often a listing is rented

We will only look at listings that are owned by superhosts (only have high review ratings)

We will only look at listings that have had 10 or more reviews in the last 12 months

We will only look at listings that do not have super high or low prices (between $100 and $1000)

Data Change Log

Got rid of all listings that had 0 reviews

Got rid of all listings that had their last review past 12 months ago

Got rid of columns AQ-AV as they had repetitive data

Got rid of column AW as all of its cells were blanks

Got rid of listings that had more than 8 days of a minimum night requirement

Created a new column that has a proper version of the neighborhoods (column AC)

Created a new column that substitutes empty cells from the "bedrooms" column with zeros

Added occupied column to change t and f to 0 and 1

Added day of week column

Added occupancy rate column

Hid several columns of irrelevant data

Hid average occupancy rates sheet as it was an intermediary sheet for calculations

The figure displays a complex phylogenetic tree with numerous branches and nodes. The tree is rooted at the bottom center and branches out towards the top left and right. Most of the nodes are represented by small blue vertical bars, while a few are represented by larger, more distinct shapes. The labels for the nodes are extremely small and illegible, appearing as short black lines or dots next to the branches. The overall structure is dense and hierarchical, indicating a large number of taxa being compared.

The figure consists of a large grid of small, vertical blue bars arranged in a staggered pattern. These bars represent individual sequence entries or nodes in a phylogenetic tree. The grid is set against a plain white background. There are approximately 100 columns and 100 rows of these bars.

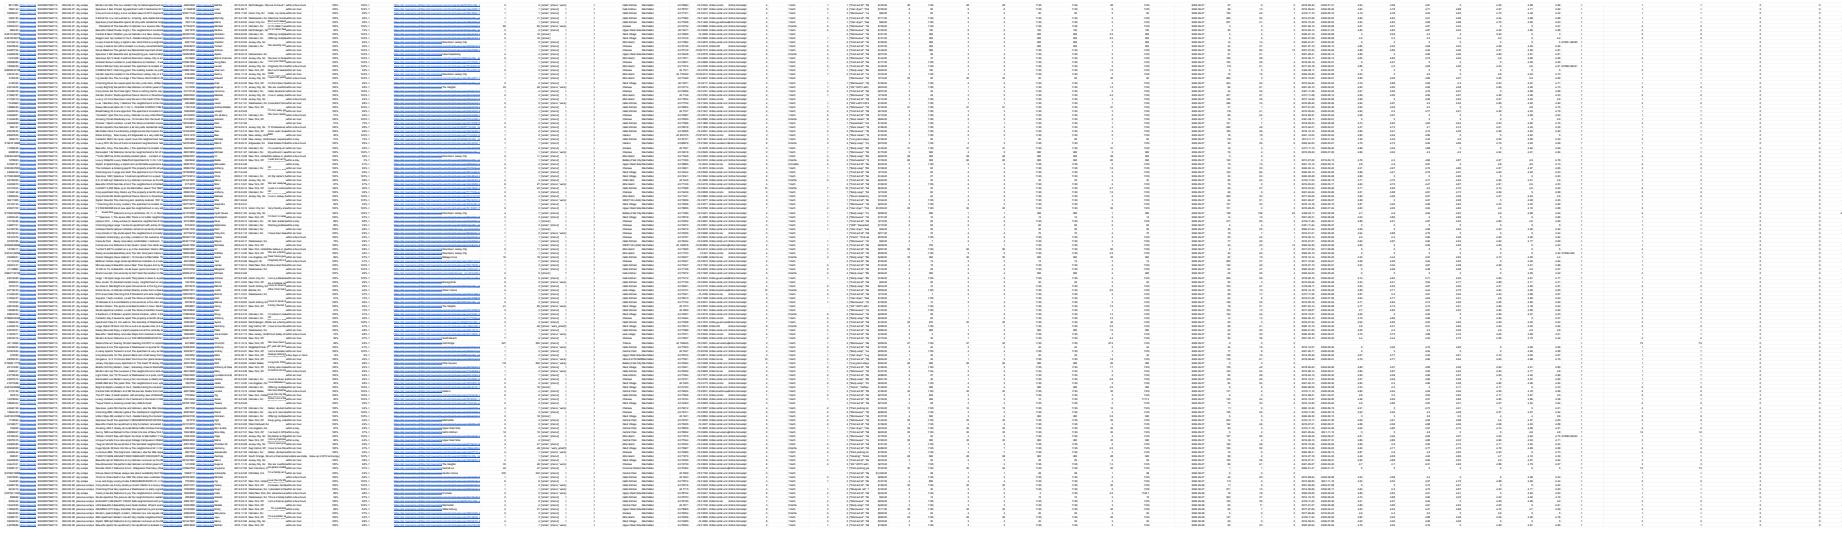

The figure consists of a 10x10 grid of small plots, each representing a different gene or sample. The y-axis for each plot is labeled with a four-digit ID (e.g., 1001, 1002, ..., 1010). The x-axis for each plot shows a series of vertical blue bars of varying heights, representing the expression level of the gene at different time points or conditions. The overall pattern shows a high degree of consistency across all genes, with most showing a similar expression profile.
